National Technology Day

India's Technological Leap Toward Atmanirbharta

Dr. Manish Mohan Gore

While science serves as the foundation for the progress of any nation, technology provides the means to resolve the daily-life problems of the citizens. Science articulates principles, whereas technology represents the practical application of those scientific principles. India celebrates National Technology Day every year on May 11 to commemorate India's major technological achievements and to honour scientists, engineers, and innovators who contribute to national development. The day marks the anniversary of the Pokhran-II Nuclear Tests conducted in 1998, which demonstrated India's indigenous technological capabilities in nuclear science and defence. This particular day highlights the importance of innovation and technology in economic growth, national security, and societal progress. It also encourages young researchers, startups, and industries to develop indigenous solutions supporting the vision of Atmanirbhar Bharat (Self-Reliant India), strengthening India's position as a global leader in science and technology.

Vision of Atmanirbhar Bharat focuses on strengthening domestic capabilities in science, technology, manufacturing, and innovation. The initiative aims to reduce dependence on imports, promote indigenous research, and build globally competitive technologies developed within the country. Scientific institutions, universities, startups, and government agencies have played a crucial role in developing home-grown technologies that support this vision.

Country's organisations such as the Department of Science and Technology (DST), Indian Space Research Organisation (ISRO), Defence Research and Development Organisation (DRDO), and Council of Scientific and Industrial Research (CSIR), Department of Biotechnology (DBT) and Department of Atomic Energy (DAE) have contributed significantly to the development of indigenous technologies across multiple sectors including space, defence, healthcare, energy, agriculture, and digital technologies. These innovations not only enhance national capability but also strengthen economic growth and technological independence.

CSIR, one of the largest publicly funded research networks with 37 national laboratories across India. CSIR develops indigenous technologies and translates scientific research into practical industrial solutions. These innovations reduce import dependence, support domestic industries, and address national challenges in health, energy, agriculture, and environment.

Bio-Bitumen from Agricultural Waste

Two laboratories of CSIR have come up with a significant innovation called bio-bitumen which is used in road construction. These labs are the Central Road Research Institute (CRRI), New Delhi and the CSIR-Indian Institute of Petroleum (IIP), Dehradun. Bio-bitumen is produced from agricultural residue, especially rice straw. The technology converts crop residue into bio-oil through pyrolysis, which is then processed into a bio-binder suitable for road construction. This innovation can replace up to 30% of petroleum-based bitumen used in road building. The technology not only reduces dependence on imported petroleum products but also addresses the environmental problem of stubble burning in northern India.

Indigenous Dialysis Technology

Scientists at the CSIR's Indian Institute of Chemical Technology (IICT) have developed an indigenous technology for manufacturing ultra-thin hollow fibre membranes used in dialysis machines. Previously, these membranes were mostly imported and were expensive. The indigenous version is cost effective and more affordable for patients. It also maintains global quality standards. The technology also includes advanced reverse osmosis and Nanofiltration systems that produce high-purity water needed for dialysis procedures. This innovation demonstrates how indigenous medical technologies can improve healthcare accessibility while reducing reliance on imported medical devices.

CSIR has also developed several indigenous diagnostic tools and biomedical innovations such as micro-PCR diagnostic devices, DNA-based diagnostic chips for infectious diseases, and low-vision enhancement devices. These technologies enable rapid and affordable disease detection and treatment. Such innovations strengthen India's healthcare infrastructure and promote domestic manufacturing of medical technologies.

Food and Environmental Protection Technologies

Thiruvananthapuram based CSIR lab National Institute for Interdisciplinary Science and Technology (NIIST) has developed high-protein rice varieties with improved nutritional value. The rice contains nearly three times the protein of conventional varieties and has a low glycaemic index, making it beneficial for health-conscious consumers. Along with this, CSIR scientists have also developed technologies such as low-sodium salt formulations and advanced food preservation methods to reduce post-harvest losses of fruits and vegetables.

CSIR laboratories have also developed innovative environmental technologies. The CSIR-National Environmental Engineering Research Institute (NEERI), Nagpur has created an indigenous Faecal Sludge and Septage Management (FSSM) system that converts waste into organic manure. The system uses a Mechanical Dewatering and Drying technology that safely processes sludge collected from septic tanks and sanitation systems. The resulting product can be used as fertilizer in agriculture. This technology promotes sanitation, environmental protection, and circular economy practices in urban areas.

Sodium-Ion Batteries and Green Hydrogen Technologies

CSIR laboratories are actively working on emerging energy technologies such as sodium-ion batteries, green hydrogen production, and advanced energy storage systems. These technologies aim to reduce dependence on imported lithium-based batteries and fossil fuels. Sodium-ion batteries use abundant and inexpensive raw materials, making them a promising solution for energy storage and electric mobility. Similarly, CSIR's research in green hydrogen technology supports India's transition toward clean and sustainable energy systems.

The Department of Science and Technology (DST) of Indian government plays a critical role by funding research, encouraging industry-academia collaboration, and promoting the commercialisation of indigenous technologies. A number of DST-supported innovations in recent years address major national challenges such as clean water, healthcare, renewable energy, digital technologies, and rural development. These technologies reduce dependence on imported solutions while strengthening India's innovation ecosystem.

AMRIT Arsenic Removal Water Technology

This is one of the most impactful DST-supported innovations for water purification. It is developed by researchers at IIT Madras. The system uses nanotechnology-based filters to remove arsenic and iron from groundwater without requiring electricity. The technology has been installed in many rural areas in states such as West Bengal, Bihar, and Uttar Pradesh, providing safe drinking water to hundreds of thousands of people. The cost of treated water is extremely low (less than five paise per litre) making it accessible to rural communities. Another major innovation supported by DST is Blue Silver Technology (developed by researchers at IIT Delhi) is used in medical fabrics, clothing, and storage materials to prevent bacterial growth and reduce infection risks.

Solar Water and Space Heating Panels for Himalayan Regions

Energy access in remote Himalayan regions is a major challenge. With DST support, researchers have developed low-cost solar water and space heating panels made from locally available materials such as wooden frames and glass sheets. These systems can heat up to 100-120 litres of water per day and increase indoor temperatures in cold regions. They have been installed in villages in Himachal Pradesh and Jammu & Kashmir, improving living conditions while reducing dependence on firewood.

DST-supported researchers at IIT Ropar developed AmbiTag, a low-cost Internet of Things (IoT) device used to monitor temperature during transportation of vaccines, medicines, and food products. The device continuously tracks temperature conditions and alerts users if there is any deviation. Previously, India depended largely on imported temperature monitoring devices. AmbiTag provides a domestic alternative at a much lower cost and can be widely used in vaccine supply chains and logistics.

Passive Ambient Air Purifier System

Air pollution has become a huge challenge especially in metropolitan cities. DST-supported scientists have developed the Passive Ambient Air Purifier System (PAARS) to address urban air pollution. The device works by using natural wind flow to pass polluted air through filters that remove particulate matter. Unlike conventional air purifiers, PAARS does not require electricity and can be installed in outdoor public spaces to reduce air pollution levels.

The Department of Biotechnology (DBT) under the Ministry of Science and Technology plays an important role in strengthening India's biotechnology ecosystem through indigenous innovations and technologies in healthcare, agriculture, and biomanufacturing. These technologies aim to build self-reliance in critical sectors.

ceuticals, diagnostics, and medical devices.

Tech breakthroughs in Space, Defence, Earth Sciences and Atomic Energy

The Indian Space Research Organisation (ISRO) has played a major role in advancing India's technological self-reliance through the development of indigenous space technologies. One of the most significant achievements is the LVM3 (formerly GSLV Mk-III), India's heavy-lift launch vehicle. It is powered by an indigenously developed cryogenic engine, enabling India to launch heavy communication satellites and deep-space missions independently. Another major breakthrough is Chandrayaan-3, India's lunar exploration mission that successfully achieved a soft landing near the Moon's south pole in 2023. The mission demonstrated India's capability in precision landing technologies, autonomous navigation, and rover operations. ISRO has also developed NavIC (Navigation with Indian Constellation), India's regional satellite navigation system that provides accurate positioning services for transportation, disaster management, and defence applications.

The Defence Research and Development Organisation (DRDO) drives India's military innovation through advanced technologies. It develops missiles like Agni and Prithvi, radar systems, electronic warfare tools, drones, and combat vehicles. DRDO also focuses on cybersecurity, artificial intelligence, and indigenous weapon systems to strengthen national security and support the vision of Atmanirbhar Bharat.

The Ministry of Earth Sciences (MoES) plays an important role in strengthening India's capabilities in weather forecasting, ocean research, climate science, and disaster management. Through its research institutions such as the Indian National Centre for Ocean Information Services (INCOIS), the National Centre for Medium Range Weather Forecasting (NCMRWF), and the National Institute of Ocean Technology (NIOT), MoES has developed several indigenous technologies that support the vision of Atmanirbhar Bharat.

One recent innovation is the Deep Ocean Mission Technologies, which include indigenous deep-sea exploration systems, underwater vehicles, and ocean observation instruments. These technologies enable India to explore marine resources, including minerals and biodiversity, in the deep ocean. Another major development is the Unified Forecast System, an advanced indigenous numerical weather prediction model used for accurate weather forecasting. This system improves predictions of monsoons, cyclones, and extreme weather events, helping farmers, disaster management agencies, and coastal communities. MoES has also developed indigenous ocean observation buoys and tsunami early-warning systems, which provide real-time monitoring of ocean conditions and help protect coastal populations from natural disasters.

The Department of Atomic Energy (DAE) plays a vital role in strengthening India's scientific and technological self-reliance through indigenous developments in nuclear energy, healthcare, agriculture, and advanced materials. These innovations reduce dependence on imported technologies and enhancing domestic capabilities. One of the major achievements of DAE is the development of the Pressurised Heavy Water Reactor (PHWR) technology. India has successfully designed and built several PHWRs using indigenous expertise and components. These reactors generate reliable nuclear power for the national grid and strengthen India's energy security.

Another important innovation is the development of the Advanced Heavy Water Reactor (AHWR), which aims to utilize India's vast thorium reserves for sustainable nuclear energy. This technology is part of India's long-term three-stage nuclear power programme. DAE institutions such as the Bhabha Atomic Research Centre have also developed advanced radiation technologies used in food preservation, crop improvement, healthcare, including cancer treatment equipment and medical isotopes for diagnostics.

The Sustainable Harnessing and Advancement of Nuclear Energy for Transforming India (SHANTI) Bill, 2025, is a major reform initiative introduced by the DAE to modernise India's nuclear energy framework. The bill aims to promote the peaceful use of nuclear energy and expand nuclear power generation to meet the country's growing energy demands.

The bill encourages domestic manufacturing of nuclear components, reactor materials, and safety systems by Indian industries. It also supports research in nuclear fuel cycles, reactor safety technologies, and waste-management systems. By fostering innovation and indigenous engineering capabilities, the SHANTI Bill strengthens technological self-reliance and supports the vision of Atmanirbhar.

One of the most significant achievements is the indigenous production of biomedical reagents, diagnostics, and therapeutics through collaboration between academia and industry. This initiative has helped create a domestic manufacturing ecosystem for biotechnology products. DBT has also supported bio-fortified crops and nutritional technologies. These crops have higher nutritional value and contribute to food and nutritional security. DBT has also supported the development of advanced genome-editing technologies such as CRISPR-Cas9, enabling Indian researchers to work on genetic disease research, crop improvement, and precision medicine.

DBT's UNATI Mission for clean technologies focuses on converting municipal waste into useful products like biofuels, chemicals, and energy through technologies such as biomethanation and bio-toilets. DBT promotes biomanufacturing and industrial biotechnology through initiatives like the National Biopharma Mission, which supports indigenous development of bio-pharma-

heavy-lift launch vehicle. It is powered by an indigenously developed cryogenic engine, enabling India to launch heavy communication satellites and deep-space missions independently.

Another major breakthrough is Chandrayaan-3, India's lunar exploration mission that successfully achieved a soft landing near the Moon's south pole in 2023. The mission demonstrated India's capability in precision landing technologies, autonomous navigation, and rover operations. ISRO has also developed NavIC (Navigation with Indian Constellation), India's regional satellite navigation system that provides accurate positioning services for transportation, disaster management, and defence applications. This reduces reliance on foreign navigation systems such as GPS. In addition, the Small Satellite Launch Vehicle (SSLV) has been developed to launch small satellites quickly and cost-effectively, supporting India's growing space industry.

PM Modi Inaugurates 594-km Ganga Expressway Connecting 12 Districts of Uttar Pradesh

Prime Minister Narendra Modi has inaugurated the 594-km-long Ganga Expressway in Hardoi district of Uttar Pradesh on April 29, 2026. Developed by the Uttar Pradesh Expressways Industrial Development Authority, the expressway will connect the western, central and eastern regions of the state through a single high-speed corridor, making it the longest expressway in Uttar Pradesh. The project is expected to significantly reduce travel time between Meerut and Prayagraj from nearly 12 hours to about 6 hours. The expressway passes through 12 districts- Meerut, Hapur, Bulandshahr, Amroha, Sambhal, Budaun, Shahjahanpur, Hardoi, Unnao, Rae Bareilly, Pratapgarh and Prayagraj of the state. A key feature of the expressway is a 3.5-km-long airstrip in Shahjahanpur, designed to facilitate emergency take-off and landing of aircraft of the Indian Air Force. The project is expected to boost industrial development, trade, agriculture and tourism, while also generating significant employment opportunities in the region. Addressing the gathering, the Prime Minister Modi said that just as the river Ganga has been the lifeline of Uttar Pradesh for centuries, the Ganga Expressway will emerge as a new lifeline for the state's development.

Rajnath Singh Calls for United Action Against Terrorism at SCO Meet

Defence Minister Shri Rajnath Singh called for a united global front to tackle terrorism, separatism and extremism by eliminating safe havens and rejecting any political exceptions. Addressing the Shanghai Cooperation Organisation (SCO) Defence Ministers' Meeting in Bishkek, Kyrgyzstan on April 28, 2026, he stressed that state-sponsored cross-border terrorism, which undermines national sovereignty, must not be ignored and that there should be no double standards in dealing with it. Recalling the victims of the terrorist attack in Pahalgam, the Defence Minister said that through Operation Sindoore, India has demonstrated its firm resolve that centres of terrorism are no longer beyond the reach of appropriate action. He reiterated that terrorism has no nationality or religion and called for a firm and collective response from all nations. Highlighting the importance of the Shanghai Cooperation Organisation, Mr. Singh noted that at a time when the global outlook appears fragmented and countries are becoming increasingly inward-looking, the SCO represents a platform of ancient civilisations and shared heritage. He said the region reflects the entrepreneurial spirit of historic trade routes and the courage of its people. He said the SCO to take decisive action against those who support, shelter or provide safe havens to terrorists, and emphasised that a peaceful future for the region requires the organisation to act as a consistent guardian of international norms.

FIFA Council Allows Afghan Women to Play International Matches

The FIFA Council has approved an amendment to its Governance Regulations. The move allows Afghan female players to compete in official international matches in FIFA competitions. The Afghanistan women's national football team has not played a competitive international match since the Taliban returned to power in 2021. The decision aims to ensure players are not excluded due to circumstances beyond their control, in line with FIFA's principles of inclusion and non-discrimination. FIFA President Gianni Infantino called it a landmark step. He said Afghan female players, including those in the FIFA-supported Afghan Women United squad, can now represent their country in official matches in coordination with the Asian Football Confederation. The FIFA-backed team will hold its next training camp in New Zealand from June 1st to 9th, 2026. The amendment takes immediate effect. FIFA will provide financial, technical and human support to ensure a safe and sustainable pathway to competition. Support packages for Afghan Women United players will continue for up to two years during the transition phase. (Compiled by EN Team)
