COURSE DESCRIPTION

 Medicine is the science and practice of diagnosing, treating, and preventing disease. Medicine encompasses various healthcare practices that have evolved to maintain and restore health by preventing and treating illness. Contemporary medicine appeals to biomedical sciences, biomedical research, genetics, and medical technology to diagnose, treat, and avoid injury and disease, typically through pharmaceuticals or surgery but also through therapies as diverse as psychotherapy, external splints and traction, medical devices, biologics, and ionizing radiation, amongst others.

Medicine has existed for thousands of years, an art (an area of skill and knowledge) frequently connecting to local culture's religious and philosophical beliefs. For example, a medicine man would apply herbs and say prayers for healing, or an ancient philosopher and physician would apply bloodletting according to the theories of humourism.

In recent centuries, since the advent of modern science, most medicine has become a combination of art and science (both basic and applied, under the umbrella of medical science). While stitching technique for sutures is an art learned through practice, the knowledge of what happens at the cellular and molecular level in the stitched tissues arises through science.
